Mission of the Advertising Page

By WILLIAM S. POWER

"The man who says he never reads advertisements, either is a proper candidate for the Ananias club or is lacking in common business sense."

That is the way a big businessman, the head of a succesful corporation, put it in talking to his selling force a few days ago.

The advertising pages of the newspapers are a barometer of business.

They are consulted by practical men and women just as financial and social pages of the newspapers are consulted for the information they contain.

Time was and not so very long ago, when the advertising pages were merely a directory of things for sale.

Today they rank side by side with the editorial pages in the vital interest of the messages that they carry.

One does not often hear a slerring remark these days as to the unreliabitity of an advertising message.

Advertisements as a class have ceased to be unreliable.

Superlative and exaggerated claims have lost favor with the advertisers.

No part of a newspaper today is more carefully edited and more ruthlessly purged of unreliable statements than the pages that carry the advertising messages.

Advertisers have discovered that franknes and conservatism and truth are the strongest allies that they can have in their efforts to win public confidence.

And so it is that today, as never before, men and women scan the advertising pages as carefully and with as deep an interest as they give to any other part of the magazines.

The advertising pages reach out to you in a spirit of friendship and co-operation.

That is their mission—to make friends of you and to win your good will.

To be sure they have something to sell you—but that is rather a secondary consideration, a by-product of advertising, if you please.

The big elemental aim is to win your good will—when that is accomplished, the selling will follow as a perfectly natural result.

You will find that the products that are most persistently and effectively advertised are almost universally the best and most dependable products.

That is a perfectly natural illustration of the law of cause and effect.

An advertisement is a pledge. The man who issues it puts himself on record. The public expects more of him—and almost invariably he measures up to expectations.

The development of advertising has put business on a higher plane. It has created a finer code of business ethics. It has made possible better products and lower prices. It has immeasurably increased comforts of life by bringing within the reach of all the conveniences and luxuries that would otherwise be enjoyed only by a few.

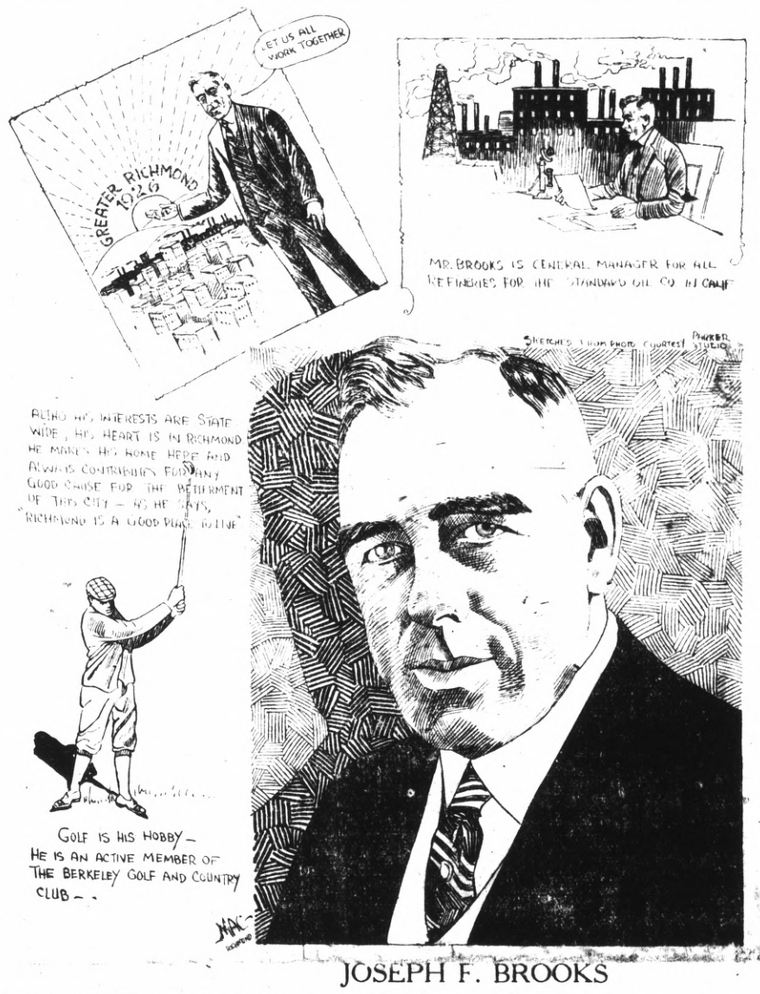
Richmond Community Builders



JOSEPH F. BROOKS

EDIOTORS NOTE. This is the second of a series of sketches of public spirited men and community builders of Richmond. Our purpose is two-fold—that individuals who have given their time and ability for the purpose of the community may be given recognition, and that such recognition may encourage others to think and act the part of community builders.

To the man who makes a success of life, through his industry and application to duties, with many obstacles to overcome in the struggle for success, much credit is due and where he has helped in the development of a district, while building up his own fortunes, he can rest content in the knowledge that he has done his share in the interest of the commonwealth and that of his own family.

Such a man is Joseph F. Brooke, general manager of all the refineries of the Standard Oil Company in California, and an active civic worker of Richmond.

Brooks was born in Cape Cod, Massachusetts, and when a boy of 8 moved with his parents to Oakland, California. He received his education in the public schools and the Oakland high school.

His first work after leaving school was that of bookkeeper for Arctic Oil works of Portland, Oregon.

When the Standard Oil company absorbed this concern, Brooks was given a position as a clerk in this organization and was sent to Point Richmond.

Like a story from the pen of Horatio Alger, Jr., is the remarkable rise from the menial position of clerk, , gradually through every department until he reaches the biggest position of all in the world's largest refinery—that of general manager.

Believing in the old adage "He who wins—must work" Brooks through energy and hard work and strict application to his duties, achieved success.

In 1923 he was promoted to general manager for all Standard Oil Refineries in California with offices in San Francisco.

Although he maintains offices in San Francisco, yet his heart is in the city of his early struggles and the many years he has been here. He has made a legion of friends in the community life of Richmond and this city spells home to him as he has built a beautiful home in Mira Vista and still takes an active interest in civic affairs.

He is on the executive committee of the Richmond Community Hotel, Inc., was a member of the board of trustees of the Union high school and is an active member of the Chamber of Commerce.

He was the first president of the Rotary club when it was organized here. He helped to reorganize the Mechanics bank with Edward Downer and E. M. Tilden in 1915. He is vice-president of the First National bank and interested in many other Richmond corporations.

His hobby is golf, being a member and past president of the Berkeley Golf club. His fraternal organizations are all Masonic bodies, Elks and Woodmen of the World, and he is a member of the Athens Athletic club of Oakland.

As Brooks expresses it "Richmond is a good place to live in"

TWO BROTHERS WORK CLEVER BOND THEFT

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—San Francisco banking circles today are tightening up on their system, as the result of the Bank of Italy losing $100,000 in bonds. Julius and Ludwig Busch, who arrived from Australia in 1924 with recommendations from Australian banking houses, became established here, Julius obtaining employment with the Anglo-California Trust company and Ludwig being employed by the Bank of Italy as manager of the foreign securities. In these trusted positions, the brothers are alleged to have worked together to embezzle foreign bonds from the Bank of Italy. Julius is reported to have taken bonds consigned in the mail to foreign purchasers and turned them over to Ludwig who sold them to other purchasers.

The "system" alleged used by Julius and Ludwig Busch, was described today by F. B. Kerman,

TESSIE PENA CONFESSES TO THE MURDER OF BENEFACTRESS

Cabaret Entertainer Tells How She Used Butcher Knife In Killing Mrs. Cole

(By Universal Service)

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Tessie Pena, 21, a dance hall entertainer, according to the police, has made a full and complete confession of how she stabbed and slashed Mrs. Frances Cole, of National City, her 81 year old benefactress to death with a heavy butcher knife, pounded her with a knife handle and savagely bit with her teeth, the aged woman.

Mrs. Pena says that she is the product of an orphanage where she lived in Camulo from the time she was 2 years of age until 13. Then she ran away, and traveled the United States, and was married twice. She made her living by lavishing her affections on men she chanced to meet.

A month ago she was penniless at Tiajuana where she had been employed as a "Percentage" entertainer at a cabaret. A friend told her that Mrs. Cole might take her in as a companion. She lived with her for a time, then according to her confession, she became enraged when Mrs. Cole "slurred a photograph of my mother." She slapped the aged woman and later attacked her with a butcher knife. Authorities state that her native was robbery.

Admits Setting Fire to Home to Get Insurance

Deputy Coroner Wm. Reed presided at Bay View avenue and Fifty-eighth street, confessed yesterday that he set fire to his home to secure insurance on the furniture for which he hoped to collect $1000.

Chaves' home was destroyed last Saturday night. Taken into custody, Chaves and his wife steadfastly denied that the fire had been deliberately set. Mrs. Chaves was released when her husband finally confessed to the insurance plot. Fire Chief Cooper had become suspicious of the fire and the actions of the householders at the time and made an investigation. As a result Chaves will be charged with arson in a complaint sworn to by Chief Cooper.

According to Deputy District Attorney James F. Hoey, investigation revealed that the fire broke out last Saturday night shortly after Chaves and his wife and child left the house, while they were sitting in their machine. Instead of returning to the building when informed it was afire, Chaves drove to the El Cerrito fire house. Unable, he said to arouse anyone, he then went to the nearest Richmond fire alarm box. He neglected to await arrival of apparatus to direct them to the fire and when firemen arrived they were unable for some time to locate the blaze. The fire was started by a coal oil heater, which had been placed under a couch.

2 Automobiles In Collision On West Side

As a result of the wet streets, a machine driven by Thomas D. Shaw, 58 Scenic avenue, Point Richmond, collided with a Ford driven by William McChristian, 545 Golden Gate avenue, Point Richmond, at the intersection of Richmond and Washington avenues, last evening.

Shaw was driving down Washington avenue hill, and McChristian was going up Washington avenue and making a left hand turn down Richmond avenue. Shaw states that he applied the breaks as quickly as possible and that McChristian did not make a full turn, but instead cut across the corner. Shifting the blame, McChristian said that he had made a correct signal and was turning as full as was possible, but that Shaw disregarded the signal and continued on and applied the brakes too late, the result being a sprung front axle on the Ford.

LARGE NUMBER IS EXPECTED AT BANQUET OF BUSINESS MEN

Employers and Employees Will Enjoy Dinner and Dance Next Monday Evening

All is in readiness for the Richmond Merchant Association get-together entertainment for the employers and employees. It is to be a turkey dinner and dance at Winters hall on Monday evening at 6:30. The affair has been arranged by Ward McRacken, Ed Crane, Al Burdick, Bill Mayer, Carl Richards, Al Furrer and J. P. Strom, and these men will act with the other members of the executive board as a reception committee and will be assisted by the following women: Evelyn Crowe, Ruth Brown, Victoria Bogardi, Harriet Davis, Norma Goetell, Rose Harverly, Edith Ketelhut, Florence Garfinkle Mareus, Edith Peterson, Enid Robinson, Davilla Theis, Ruby Tully, Marie Zane and Marie Macdonald Jensen, secretary.

The speaker of the evening is Kenneth Millican, who has been declared "a world-beater" by some of the merchants, who have heard him. He has a different message on "Cooperation" from ordinary speakers and his association with the Pacific National bank of San Francisco, has equipped him to qualify as an authority on the subject selected.

Carl Richards has selected Bibbins orchestra to play for the dance program, which Al Furrer has arranged, and those who "trip the light fantastic" have a treat in store for them.

Al Furrer has such a strenuous dance program worked out that it seems wise to provide—liquid refreshments. Mrs. J. P. Strom was selected to preside at the punch table with several capable assistants.

Lud Johnson is to lead the community singing so you are urged to bring your best singing voice along for he expects you to "do your stuff" in good style. There may be some surprise numbers for Denny Shaw is to tickle the ivories and help Lud out. Remember there has not been a get-together dinner since before the picnic in September.

This is President Ward McRacken's first "big" event and every detail has been carefully planned to make it a real success so as to show that the merchant an dhis fellow workers at all times get together to give Richmond the best store service.

Employees of P. G. & E. Make Merry At Dance

A large crowd attended the dance and entertainment given last night by the Pacific Service Employees Association of the Pacific Gas and Electric company at the Odd Fellows hall.

W. E. Kelly was in charge of the event and J. E. Mulgrew arranged the program, which was presented by Mayme La Rue of Oakland.

The success of the affair is due primarily to the work of J. C. Hitchcock, who arranged the event.

The program which was presented during the dancing, consisted of:

1. Tango Dance by Mildred Dettman and Violet Thompson.
2. Scarf Dance by Babe Pretious.
3. Apache Dance by Mildred Dettman and Violet Thompson.
4. Acrobatic Dance by Babe Pretious.
5. Vocal Solo by Mayme La Rue
6. Gypsy Dance by Mildred Dettman and Babe Pretious.

The music was furnished by the Orpheus orchestra from Oakland.

The entertainment was attended by members of the association from all the bay regions. The entertainment was by talented members.

HOME BUILDING IN THIS CITY NOT KEEPING PACE WITH INDUSTRY GROWTH

ONLY 684 HOMES BUILT DURING LAST FIVE YEARS WHILE POPULATION HAS INCREASED NEARLY 12,000

In spite of the fact that Richmond has an estimated population increase of 11,243 during the last five years only 684 homes and twenty-four apartment houses have been built here during that period.

According to the figures which have been compiled by the RECORD-HERALD after an exhaustive search of the records of the building inspector Richmond as a home community has not been keeping up with its business development.

During the same five years or from January 1, 1921 to December 31, 1925, 108 business houses have been built or nearly one business house to every six residences constructed.

The figure of homes does not take into consideration the El Cerrito section of Mira Vista but that at its best has had about fifty homes built during the five year period. Taking these fifty homes and the twenty-four apartment houses estimating each apartment house to have six apartments, we have 878 new home available during the last five years. Considering that the average family consists of five people which is a large family in this day and age we have 4,390 people.

The estimated population increase from 1920 when the population was 16,843 until December 31, 1925 when the population was 28,086 is 11,243.

Figures compiled by the water, gas and electric companies, the schools and post office substantiate the 11,243 population increase during the past five years. The number of business houses built, the increase in wealth and the increase in business again substantiate the estimated increase.

On the face of it the situations seems to be that Richmond home building is not keeping up with the industrial and commercial growth of the city. In other words a large number of those who are benefiting from Richmonds growth, are employed in the manufacturing plants here and are in other ways making their living are not living here but in other cities of the Eastbay.

One solution that has been suggested is that a large number of houses and apartments in the city were vacant on January 1, 1921 and that many of these were occupied during the intervening five years and that there are not as many vacant houses in Richmond at the present time as there were on January 1, 1921.

The amount of residence building during these last five years as shown by figures at the office of the building inspector are year by year: 1921, 61 costing $158,337.00; 1922, 108, costing $379,408.00; 1923, 190, costing $610,237.00; 1924, 134, costing $490,415.00; 1925, 190 costing $679,000.00. A total of 684 homes costing $2,317,928.00.

It will be noted that exactly as many houses were built during the year 1923 as were in 1925, the cost of these same number of houses however was nearly $70,000 greater in 1925 indicating that either a better type of home is being built or that the cost of building has increased more than ten per cent in two years.

During the five year period 2,302 building permits were secured for various purposes and buildings costing $4,799,269.00 were constructed, about half of this amount being for homes. The remaining permits were divided as follows: Miscellaneous, 1019 permits, $197,280.00; old work, repairs and alterations 428 permits $180,913.00; Business buildings, 108 permits $807,212.00; public buildings, 24 permits $750,765.00; Apartments, 24 permits, $329,852.00; Industrial, 14 permits, costing $570,039. The industrial figure is less than one tenth of this type of building however, as it is not necessary under the city building law to secure a permit for industrial buildings.

RADIO PROGRESS

The radio is in a stage of improvemen. that is a little confusing to us who are witnessing the development of its efficiency so close at hand. While the automobile and the flying machine were being made practical we did not grasp the facts. But looking back we can see the larger picture of motor car progress, just as a few years later we shall be able to look back upon radio with more understanding of its breath-taking strides.

Hundreds of thousands of families are participating to some extent in the enjoyment of radio and contributing a bit they scarcely realize to its advancement. The international tests being conducted this week are being helped by the ordinary fan, who knows little beyond the practice of twirling the dials and nothing about the principals wired into the box. Scattered over the country are a lot of experts of various degrees, largely quite young men who have some comprehension of the innards of their sets, and go about responding to the tests with a fair intelligence.

$400 A MONTH

Colonel William Mitchel is not injured, the law of the army is not violated or even strained and the country is greatly benefitted by the outcome of the air service court martial.

In approving the sentence, President Coolidge did that which was right and expected of him. At no time during his trouble has Colonel Mitchell had any reason to look forward to exoneration, and, we believe, he placed himself in the position to receive a sentence in order to convince the public that something ought to be done to whip the government into a little activity in air preparation.

It chanced that the colonel had private means so that the loss of his prescribed pay and allowance as a whole, instead of in part, would not have caused him great financial embarrassment.

DEMOCHATS FEEL LASH

Although the democratic senators quickly ran to heel when their leaders and their principal newspaper organs advised them that their anti-tax-bill programme would make for the annihilation of their party; they are still inclined to lag in the traces. As matters stand it is frankly admitted on Capitol Hill that the tax-bill could be put over and enacted with very little further delay. At the present time, the possibility which bulked large a little while ago, that Demorcratic activities might operate to delay the enactment of the bill beyond March 1st, tax day, has practically disappeared, and in the event that the people get relief in their first tax bill, the disposition will be to forgive everybody and rejoice generally.

THE INDIANS AND THE PILGRIMS

Tall, straight, almost naked he came. With his bow in one hand and two arrows in the other, he walked down the principal street of Plymouth.

Just one lone Indian.

Plymouth was the little colony that the Pilgrims founded back in the year 1620. After their first long, hard winter they had been getting along very well.

As the one lone Indian walked down the street, he said one word to all who passed.

"Welcome."

He had learned that one word in English because he had been in that part of country when one of Captain John Smith's boats passed that way.

You may imagine the surprise of the Pilgrims. Here was a brave probably a chief, who was welcoming them to his own country in a word from their country.

They made him very welcome. He told them his name was Samoset.

A few days later he came again, this time with five more strong savages. Every few days he returned to see them. He brought his Indian friends, Squanto and Massasoit, to see them.

The Pilgrims did well to make friends of these men. For they had lived there all their lives. Their father had taught them the lessons which they now taught the Pilgrims; how to cultivate corn, when to plant it and how to store it. For you must remember that corn was a new grain to these people from England and they might have lost much of their profits before ever they learned how best to keep it, had they been left to themselves.

And Samoset taught them how to catch fish without even using a hook or a net. He showed them how to catch eels. And he showed them how to catch little fish that couldn't be eaten, but that could be planted in the hills with the corn seed, thus forming manure. For the soil there was not of the best and it needed to be enriched.

You may be sure that the Pilgrims were glad enough to have these Indian neighbors. Sometimes they wondered how they could have learned their fishing and hunting lessons without them.

SYNOPSIS

Paul, innocent young brother of Prince Michael Yervedoff, is vamped for revenge by Dolores, one of Michael's cast-offs. Michael, meanwhile, is honestly interested in Colette, an unworldly girl whose motherless nephew has been stolen by her Apache brother-in-law, Emile. Through his friend, Dechine, the Apache King, Michael recovers the boy for Colette. The platonic friendship of Michael and Colette ends in a passionate embrace.

CHAPTER XII

Michael felt himself to be an up and doing fellow indeed as he rode homeward over the wide and black-paved rivers that were the boulevards of Paris under the waning stars of past midnight. There had been a time, when Michael was in his early twenties, that people in Moscow, in Vienna, in this same Paris, had involuntarily turned to look well at him when he strode along the streets, so cocky and pugnacious and fine a human animal was he, so pregnant was his manner with the menace and marvel of glorious youth. Tonight Michael felt all the thrilling tumult of that flush hour of his period of greatest ego roistering again in his veins; all the enthusiastic will of youth to conquer and to achieve had hounded out of his blood the flabby corpuscles of ambitionless lethargy.

He was in love—genuinely, tenderly, and for the first time. He would waste and idle no longer, but work and husband; he would do this and that, and thus and so; he would be Michael Yervedoff, the busy humanitarian—not Prince Michael, the trifler.

He would marry Colette, and reclaim Paul; he would father Billy, and set Emile on two feet, face forward, in another land; he would shock, amaze and gratify Aunt Sophia—and shake, confound, and shoo Armand, Freddy Erskin, Ninon and the rest of that parasitical crew.

"Come upstairs with me quickly—it is Monsieur Paul—"

Thus, thought Michael in that genial and benevolent spirit of serving which is a blessed part and parcel of the joy of giving.

This was on the flood tide of his emotional discovery of himself, as he rode home. But there is as curious and inevitable a consistency and regularity in the tides of men's moods as there is in the unceasing ocean; every flood tide has an ebbing, every rise a falling, great or small as the beach of circumstances may prescribe.

Sergius, with white face and uneasy eyes, met Michael at the door.

"Come upstairs with me quickly, Your Highness—it is Monsieur Paul—"

While Michael flung his hat and stick, coat and gloves, anxiously aside then trotted up the stairs with him, Sergius—who had become almost inarticulate through his years of service from an ingrowing habit of silent anticipation without recourse to more than monosyllabic speech — explained, with a color of feeling in his words rare for one so stolidly efficient:

"I heard him fall against the outer door, and found him there, sir, in a sort of stupor. He had a pistol in his hand. I took it from him, carried him upstairs, put him to bed. Then I summoned Doctor Agueil, who said—drink—shock—must have absolute quiet, or will lose mind. Doctor gave him sleeping powders. Monsieur Paul said in his delirium, sir—that he—that he—was going to shoot—you!"

They had reached the bedside now; Michael, shocked but not surprised that Paul's delirious rage had been directed partly against him, looked down sorrowfully upon the bleary face and tousled, matted head of his once fair young brother—signs of dissipation and craze that even Sergius' kindly ministrations had not erased. Paul was so much the blighted boy that Michael's heart sank, freighted with compassion and regret.

"Poor old fellow," he mourned, stroking the groaning boy's head, "evidently the bubble has burst and you know the truth. Well—I'll take you away from Paris just as soon as you're able to go and I'll do my best to help you to forget!"

All through that night Michael with mothering tenderness in his manner, sat in a chair beside Paul's bed, the unconscious boy's hand in his. A complexity of feeling oppressed Michael, who had never before seen Paul intoxicated. He devoutly hoped that Paul had found out the truth, and that he and Dolores had parted for ever.

"Surely, nothing less than that would have caused him to get in this shape," he reasoned.

No matter how sorry a spectacle Paul was at that moment, Michael consoled himself with the thought that the condition was but temporary—but that the cure ought to be permanent.

When Michael, worn out with his watching, dozed off to sleep just as the maroon dawn dispersed the night it was to dream not of Paul or of Dolores—but of Colette.

The next noon when Michael walked into his lawyer's office and found Emile already there, the bad impression that he had formed of the Apache was further increased by a good look at him in the light of day. Emile's shifty eyes seemed to have trouble to face the brightness.

It did not take long to draw up and sign the necessary papers; then Michael counted out a roll of notes.

"You're not going to let me land in South America without—enough money—I hope?" Emile whined pleadingly, his greedy eyes on the money in Michael's hand.

Michael was curt and contemptuous, "Here is enough to get you there and keep you for six months. In that time, you will either have to find a job or be a little further along the road to hell than you are now!"

Presently Emile was gone out of Michael's life for all time.

When Michael quickly returned home he found that Paul had not yet come out of his stupor.

"It is best so," Michael reflected "for when he wakes up he will probably be refreshed physically and mentally and I'll be able to take him in hand. Then, fresh scenery and fresh surroundings will do more than anything to make him forget this horrible affair."

Not wishing to leave Paul's side Michael dispatched a note to Colette by messenger, saying that Emile had signed the agreement and gone. He explained that he was unable to go to her, owing to Paul's illness. In conclusion he wrote:

> See how right I was, dearest? Our platonic friendship has taken wings to be replaced by love, a true and lasting love which means happiness for us the rest of our lives. Since I can't see you, at least send me a little note by this messenger. It will be the first letter that I have ever received from you. Why, I don't even know what your handwriting looks like. It need not be a long letter; in fact, just three words will do—providing they are the right three words. MICHAEL

No sooner had the messenger to Colette left than Armand was announced. Michael, descending to the library, found him breathless.

"I couldn't find a taxicab," he gasped, "which is my usual predicament when I want one in a hurry, and I almost ran here all the way from the Place de l'Opera. Tell me, have you seen Paul?"

Michael reluctantly admitted that Paul was asleep upstairs.

"The best thing for him, poor fellow," Armand replied, "for I imagine that he has been through a bitter ordeal. And how did I guess it? Well, listen! Taking my daily constitutional, I was just turning into the Rue Chambrai when I walked right into Dolores—right into her—so that there was no chance for escape, for we almost collided. I raised my hat and was about to pass on, but she stopped me.

"'Monsieur Armand,' she said, 'I presume that you sometimes see our mutual friend, Prince Yervedoff, occasionally?' There was a devilish smile on her lips, Michael."

"Go on—go on—" Michael prompted impatiently.

"Well, when I told her that I saw you very often, in fact, that I was thinking of dropping in on you this afternoon, she said, 'Be good enough to take a message to him from me, if you will. Say that the pleasure of being his devoted sister-in-law'—"

"Good God!" Michael broke in tensely, "do you think—that it did happen? Do you think that Paul married her?"

Mr. Berlin timed his wedding just right to get a lot publicity when there was nothing worse going on.

Young People of First Presbyterian At Stunt Party

The theme of the Young People's party given last night at the first Presbyterian church was centered about the automobile. The games and stunts presented were along this idea.

A clever comedy was presented by a group of the young people. The skit was named the "Mellerdrammer" and it was a burlesque upon the type of melo-dramas which were presented years ago at the theaters.

Theodore Allison and William Pankey were in charge of the event, which drew a large crowd despite the weather conditions.

Today, at the First Presbyterian church, William Pankey will conduct the morning services. His theme will be: "The Waiting Christ." He will also be in charge of the Christian Endeavor meetings.

The evening services will be conducted by Theodore Allison whose theme will be "Watchers at the Cross." Allison will also give a talk during the Sunday school services.

Allison and Pankey are known as the Gospel Team. They are from the San Francisco Theological Seminary and each week they visit different churches and conduct the services.

Tire Repairing Cold Cash In Your Pocket

There are two ways to take care of a tire injury. One way is to put a blowout patch in the tire and let it stay there.

The other way—and the only good way—is to use the blow-out patch only as a temporary repair. At the first opportunity the tire should be taken to a competent and able vulcanizer for permanent repair. This means saving thousands of miles of the tire's life.

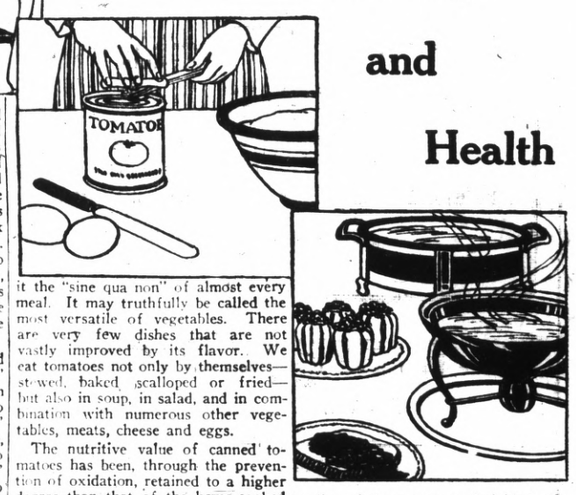
Canned Tomatoes For Economy and Health



WHEN Columbus discovered America, he also discovered the tomato. While tomatoes are supposed to have originated in Peru, the land of the Incas, they had found their way farther north, by the time Columbus arrived on the shores of the Americas. The Spaniards took tomatoes back to Europe with them. From Spain they gradually got into Morocco, and from there into Italy, with the result that today the Italians are the greatest tomato eaters in the world—next to the people of the United States.

The name of the tomato is derived from the Mexican word, "tomatl." When the Italians brought them from Morocco, they called the tomato "pomo dei Mori," or "Moor apple." And when the tomato got into France, the Italian name was Frenchified into "pomme d'amour," or "apple of love." In England this was shortened to "love-apple." And by that name the tomato was known for a long time.

Because they were so beautiful, people grew them in their gardens for some two hundred years. But since the tomato belongs to the nightshade family, some members of which are poisonous, it was considered dangerous to eat. Then, finally, somebody tried it—and nothing happened to him. And so its popularity began. It was about 1830 that the tomato began to be generally used in the United States.

The popularity of this gorgeous-colored "love-apple" increased at a rapid rate, when it was discovered in how many ways it could be eaten—raw, stewed, fried, baked, as ketchup and chili sauce, and in delicious combination with various other foods. So well and widely was the tomato liked, that it was the first vegetable to receive the attention of the canning industry, which had started in Baltimore with the putting up of oysters and other sea foods. Today, it is canned in nearly every section of the United States—in fact, always in the center of all tomato growing districts.

In recent years, when scientists began talking about those mysterious elements called vitamins, canned tomatoes were tested for their vitamin content and were found to have a very high percentage thereof. This discovery has made them extremely valuable from a health standpoint as well as from those of convenience and economy.

But, undoubtedly, it is the tomato's adaptability—the wide variety of uses to which it may be put—which makes it the "sine qua non" of almost every meal. It may truthfully be called the most versatile of vegetables. There are very few dishes that are not vastly improved by its flavor. We eat tomatoes not only by themselves—stewed, baked scalloped or fried—but also in soup, in salad, and in combination with numerous other vegetables, meats, cheese and eggs.

The nutritive value of canned tomatoes has been, through the prevention of oxidation, retained to a higher degree than that of the home-cooked product. This fact, together with the additional asset of their convenience in this form makes them a staple in the diet of millions, all the year 'round. Their economy is another valuable consideration. Even when not included in "special sales" of ready-to-serve foods, they are probably the cheapest of all canned products.

A greater variety of dishes can be made from tomatoes, than from any other vegetable—with, perhaps, the single exception of potatoes. Canned tomatoes, with corn and peas, are the most widely consumed of all canned vegetables.

Always welcome are new recipes for tasty dishes that may be made from this excellent vegetable, which also possesses the succulency and mild acidity of fruit. Here are a few which the housewife will find comparatively simple to make, and delicious for dinner or luncheon dishes:

AN APPETIZING SOUFFLE IN NEAPOLITAN STYLE

Blend thoroughly seven tablespoons butter and seven of flour, and pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, 1¼ cups rich milk and one medium can of tomatoes. Bring to boiling point and let simmer two minutes; then add 2 1/3 cups of grated cheese, 1¼ teaspoon salt and a little pepper. Break macaroni in half-inch pieces and cook 1¼ cups in boiling salted water until soft. Drain the macaroni and add 5¼ tablespoons melted butter. Add this to the tomato mixture, then stir in the well-beaten yolks of four eggs and fold in the whites of the eggs, beaten until stiff. Turn into a buttered baking-dish and bake until firm. Serve immediately. This will serve a large family.

DELICIOUS FRITTERS

Cook for twenty miutes the contents of a can of tomatoes, to which have been added six cloves, one-eighth cup of sugar and three slices of onion. Rub through a sieve, and season with one teaspoon salt and a few grains of pepper. Melt one-fourth cup of butter, and, when bubbling, add gradually the tomato and one-half cup cornstarch. Cook two minutes, then add one egg slightly beaten. Pour into a shallow, buttered tin and cool. Turn on a board, cut into squares, diamonds or strips. Roll in bread or cracker crumbs, dip in beaten egg, again in crumbs, and fry in deep fat. Drain, and serve while hot.

A TASTY COMBINATION

Drain the liquor from a large can of tomatoes and mix the remaining solid portions of tomato with the contents of a medium can of corn. Add a pinch of soda, a teaspoonful of sugar, and salt and pepper to taste. Let simmer a few minutes, then turn into a baking-dish, on the bottom of which there is already a layer of cracker crumbs dotted with small pieces of butter. Put another layer of crumbs on top of the tomato and corn mixture, and on top of this thin slices of a good, snappy cheese. Bake in the oven until brown.

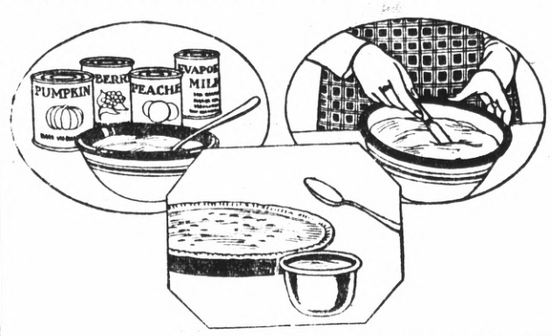
The Great American Dessert



All the world over, we Americans are known as a pie-eating nation. Our fondness for pie has come to be regarded as a national joke. Our farmers like it for breakfast. It is our business men's favorite luncheon. The American housewife is expected to supply her family with pie almost daily. It is a staple dessert.

The modern cook is fortunate in having many different kinds of filling for pie put up in ready-to-serve form. After making her pie crust, she has only to open a can of pumpkin, mince-meat, peaches, apricots or berries of any kind, pour the contents upon the lower layer of pastry tough and the pie is ready for the oven. If desired, a top layer of pastry may be used. The making of the crust is now the only real labor connected with pie-making.

Even the filling for apple pie—that general favorite—is now made ready for the housewife in the delicious form of canned applesauce. The addition of a few drops of lemon-juice will increase its tartness, while one or two eggs beaten well may be added for richness. The ready-to-serve pumpkin is smooth and creamy. A little spice may be added to suit the individual taste. The use of canned berries for pie saves quite a bit of time for the housewife.

If you like a forceful, melodramatic story, rich in action, drama and love appeal, with a strong undercurrent of refreshing humor, staged against colorful backgrounds that vividly recall the historic California gold rush of 1849, then you are sure to enjoy "The Golden Princess," which will be screened at the Richmond Theatre today only.

For this Paramount production, directed by Clarence Badger from Frances gnew's scenario of a Bert Marte story, is compounded of those elements just mentioned. Furthermore, it has the added advantage of the irresistible presence of Betty Bronson, supported by a distinguished cast, including Neil Hamilton, Rockcliffe Fellowes Phyllis Haver and Joseph Dowling.

As "The Golden Princess," Betty brings to the screen a character so quaintly beautiful that words alone cannot describe her. This is her first starring role and she makes the most of it. The plot deals with her adventures in the gold mining camps and leads up to a smashing climax in which she and Neil Hamilton are trapped in a mine. The exciting rescue and the subsequent cave-in of the mine furnish thrills aplenty.

Other features on the same program include "The Scarecrow", Buster Keaton comedy; "Kinograms" world news events.

Martinez Family Heads Bill At the California

The Martinez Family, eight in number, billed as "The Saxophone Eight", one of the most unique musical offerings on the variety stage will be the headline attraction of the five acts of road show vaudeville at the California Theatre today. Their repertoire of selections is one of the most comprehensive offered by an act of this kind. Solos, Duets, trios and ensemble numbers follow in quick order with each one a musical treat. Music lovers will vote them one of the best musical treats Richmond has known in years.

With knockabout acrobatics with rings and a cradle the Arrowsmiths come highly recommend as one of the best Athletic novelties ever seen on the Pacific Coast. The dainty Miss in the act does her full share of the daring stunts and joins her partner in some sensational feats of endurance and strength.

Covering territory with Leroy and Betty is a singing talking comedy act arranged and presented to make a most enjoyable bit of vaudeville.

Andy Gump in burlesque musical moments is always a big favorite with young and adult members of the audience.

Dorothy Brenner the International Comedienne en route for her Eastern engagements has just returned from a tour of the Orient and Australia. Her songs are of the comedy order, some are new and some her own composition. This dainty artiste a product of the big time and the musical comedy field is always sure of a welcome wherever she appears.

English society life forms the background of the story of "The Circle," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of W. Somerest Maugham's famous stage play, today's screen feature, with Eleanor Boardman in the leading role.

The action centers about an English Lord and Lady, the latter of whom plans to desert her husband and elope with another man. Before she does so, however, she invites to her home her husband's mother, who thirty years before ran away with the man she loved, deserting her husband and baby. The results of the union of the runaway couple of thirty years ago with the present couple who plan to do the same thing, forms the basis of the story.

Other features on the same program include "Felix On The Job", a Felix the cat comic; "Kinograms" world news events; Carl Richard's California Orchestra; Larry Canelo, at the organ.

Police Officers Discuss Problems Affecting Traffic

The Eastbay police departments and the motor vehicle departments will work together hereafter, in an effort to reach juvenile speeders, and violators of the traffic laws, it was announced yesterday at the meeting of the Eastbay police chiefs and traffic officers, which was held at Oakland.

Traffic Officer Ed Baker represented Richmond at the meeting.

It was decided upon at the session, that each community will regulate its own parking limit, the only effort of standardizing to be the general use of the same type of signs. The state law governing all communities in the matter of passing street cars at ten miles an hour, when within six feet of the car, was agreed to.

In the matter of street buttons it was suggested that the Oakland system of having one button at the center of the intersection, makes it to difficult for the cars of long wheel base to make a turn in the narrow streets.

Consideration will be given to the methods used by Berkeley and Piedmont, where the triple button is used. This provides for three or four buttons in the center of the streets, approaching the intersection. It is said that this method facilitates the movement of the traffic stream.

Another meeting will be called for on Thursday to settle other problems.

Mass Meeting At San Pablo Monday Night

The public will be treated to three numbers taht promise to be the scream of the evening at the big booster meeting to be held in St. Paul's church in San Pablo next Monday night. Al L. Paulsen will stage a Chinese monologue that has been always the big hit of the theaters, Archie Winchole will sing some Scotch songs, and Alexander Laurendeau will do some juggling that will have everyone captivated.

The program will begin at 7:30 o'clock promptly, and a large crowd is expected.

Speeches will be made by the following able speakers: Rev. Joseph Porta, S. T. L. pastor; H. C. Soito, E. H. Woodfelt, A. L. Laurendeau, Archie Winchcole, Frank Cronan, and J. L. Azevedo. Music for dancink will be provided by the Cameo Serenaders under the direction of Frank Avenlis, after which refreshments will be served.

Mrs. Sanford to Conduct Realty Business Here

This is to announce to the people of Richmond and Contra Costa county, that Mrs. W. H. Sanford is continuing in the real estate business, formerly conducted by her husband, W. H. Sanford, who passed away a few months ago. Mrs. W. H. Sanford is a licensed real estate broker, under the name of Jennie E. Sanford, Realtor.

Sanford was a pioneer, coming to Richmond with his family when Richmond was a wheat field, and there was one house on Macdonald avenue. He could see twenty years ahead, and told the people who invested at that time what was going to take place and the wonderful commercial city that Richmond would grow to be, as nature has done so much for Richmond; giving the right location on the mainland side of San Francisco bay, where rail and water meet, the ideal location for all kinds of industries, with plenty of room for a million people.

It is only a few years ago that Chicago was a burned area, and the city has been rebuilt. Mrs. Sanford's father was an architect and builder, and helped to rebuild the city, and today Chicago is 55 miles across one street with more people that there are in the State of California. So we are in our infancy, and when we think of the wonderful possibilities of the Pacific Coast and the advantageous location of our City of Richmond with its marvelous growth in the last 18 years, we cannot comprehend what will take place in the next 18 years.

It behooves all young people starting out in life, as well as everyone else, to become the owner of some of these wonderful locations that can be purchased now at a nominal cost.

At one time, you could buy property in the heart of Los Angeles for a song, and today you would pay thousands of dollars ten miles out of the city limits, and Richmond has a location superior to Los Angeles.

Dr. Cadman, of the University of California, spoke Tuesday evening at the Business and Professional Women's club here in Richmond, and his subject was "How far can you see?" If people could just see five years ahead they would feel like purchasing all the available property in and about Richmond, California. Our local people are going to wake up some day, after outside capital has come in and bought up all the available space, and find the property beyound their reach.

When we think of the possibilities of Oriental trade, and our harbor possibilities, there is room here for many big industries employing thousands of people.

VAG GETS 10 DAY SENTENCE

A man giving his name as Hugh Griggs was arrested by the local police yesterday on a charge of vagrancy. He appeared before Police Judge C. A. O'Dell and was sentenced to a ten days jail term.

Griggs, according to the police, was wandering from garage to garage in the city asking for the manager. He stated that he was looking for work and did not see any use in asking the mechanics.

The police states, however, that in several instances Griggs spoke to the manager of several garages, but only talked about the storage of an automobile that, the police declared, is only a child of his imagination.

UNIQUE EDIFICE TO HOUSE RELICS OF VANISHED PEOPLE

Outdoor Museum With Exhibits Protected by Plate Glass Will Perpetuate Relics of Unknown Indian Tribe.

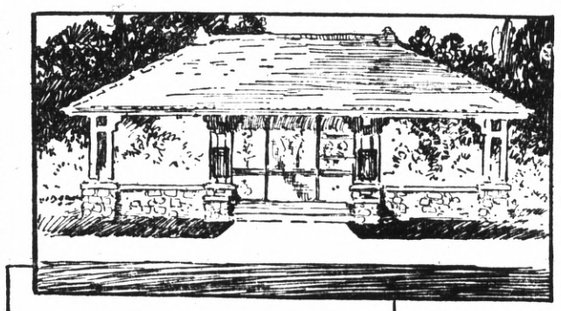
THREE hundred years ago, or more, the peaceful calm of the smiling valley that lies to the north of the Little Miami River, and to the east of where Cincinnati now stands, was shattered by the blood-curdling shriek of the war whoop and the swish of the tomahawk as it hurtled towards its prey.

When the next day's sun rose above the hills the village that had been established there for a hundred years was a smouldering heap of ruins in the midst of which danced and howled the dreaded Shawnee raiders. Its inhabitants were dead or had escaped to the forest. In one night a flourishing community had been swept forever from off the face of the earth.

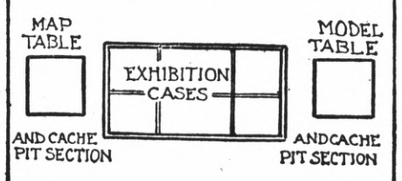
Who Were They?

Who were the people who founded this community? Certain it is that they were neither the Mound Builders, nor the Miami or Shawnee tribes who occupied the country for many years before being driven out by the Algonquin stock found there by the white man in the middle of the Eighteenth Century when he first passed down the Ohio. No one knows who they were.

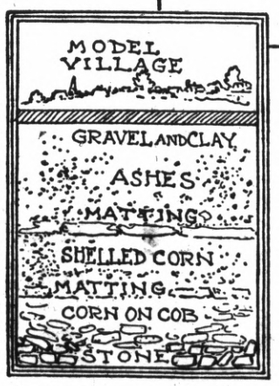
The careful studies based on the fourteen hundred skeletal remains excavated by the Peabody Museum at Harvard have left the question unanswered. But these skeletal remains and other traces of an ancient settlement throw a strong light on a primitive American community; and the people of the town of Mariemont, Ohio, which now occupies the site, are about to build an "open-air" or "outdoor" museum to guard these relics for posterity.



The "Outdoor" Museum.



The Floor Plan of the Museum



Section Through Model Table and Cache Pit.

Protected by Plate Glass

An outdoor museum seems, on first thought, a contradiction in terms, for it is essential in the case of practically all museum exhibits that they be protected from the idiosyncrasies of the weather and particularly from dampness. It is by the use of plate glass that the problem will be solved by people of Mariemont.

The museum itself is to be built of native rock and timber, while the exhibits are to be encased in strong sheets of plate glass which will serve to protect them. At the same time, because of its flawless texture, the glass will give a clear and undistorted view of the relics which graphically depict the life and customs of a vanished people.

Customs of the Tribe

That these first known inhabitants of the site of Mariemont wandered far afield when game became scarce or crops failed, is shown by the foreign nature of the ornaments which the burial mounds have yielded and which will soon be on exhibition in the new museum. Further evidence of the same nature is afforded by the cache pits, or underground storehouses, which they filled against coming back empty-handed.

That they were true settlers, however, and not nomads is made clear by a large and well constructed fort whose outlines are still recognizable in spite of the heavy forest growth that has overspread it. From this fort the builders could see the enemy whether he came by land from the "dark and bloody" battle ground of Kentucky, or by the historic waterway from east or west.

The identity of these people will probably always remain a mystery, but by means of the unique outdoor structure to be built by the people of Mariemont, a knowledge of their manners and customs will be preserved for future generations of Americans.

Shop at Home —First

YEARS ago people went into the market place "to shop." They went, not knowing what they would find, its price or its worth. Weary hours were spent in inspection, in bargaining and buying.

Today manufacturers are bringing the market place to your home. Every time a newspaper comes, a host of people are ringing your door-bell. Merchants and manufacturers are waiting on the doorstep to spread their goods at your feet for you to look at —to inspect at leisure and in comfort.

Don't let the opportunity that advertisements offer you slip by. No matter what you want, clothing, groceries, a fountain pen or a farm, you will find the "better" ones in the advertising columns.

The advertisements tell you where you can get what you want. They are a guarantee of worth that protects your purchase.

Buying with a definite knowledge is so much better than shopping at random. Study the advertisements

LOCAL CAGERS LOSE TWO TO LOWELL HIGH

The Richmond high varsity lost a tough game to the Lowell high cagers of San Francisco, 23-20 a the high school gym yesterday. In the preliminary game the lightweights lost their game 16 to 15.

The local squads played a good game. The Lowell unlimited team had a system of advancing the ball down the court that gained them the points. They featured long distance shots that hit the ball's eye.

Dyer did his best at forward in spite of the fact that he has been on the sick list.

The local team was stale, there is no doubt about that, but they played a wonderful game in the final canto, fighting to the last.

The score at the half stood 16-6 for the visitors and in the last half the Richmond team got away with some long shots.

Iyer and Barbieri seemed to be set with hard luck yesterday; many of the shots from a distance hit the bucket and scooped out.

In the lightweight game the squad did their best under the handicap they struggled under. The score was close and at the end of the fourth quarter, the score stood 15 up. An extra period had to be staged. A Lowell man shot a foul, which won the game.

Hoskings was high man for the 130's with eight points; Johnson was high man for the unlimited team with eight points.

The lineups were as follows:

130's—DeBaere, f., 0; Bowman, f., 3; Tittemore, f., 3; Hoskings, g., 8; Johnson, g., 1. Frankie, sub.

Unlimiteds—Villalovos, f., 2; Dyer, f., 7; G. Johnson, c., 8; Gualdoni, g., 2; Barbieri, g., 0. Sub. Thompson.

MOTORDOM IS EXPECTING A GOOD SEASON

By ROY C. HAYES
Universal Service Automobile Editor

DETROIT, Jan. 30. — Orders pouring into Detroit Motor car factories indicate that this winters motor car sales will set an unexampled record. Marked resumption in retail buying is noted in those sections that have had their annual automobile shows.

The buying stimulus induced by this year's shows has been unqualled in the history of the industry. This is not only an awarded tribute to the automobile show as an institution but overall a concerted recognition of the goodness and intrinsic worth of the 1926 automobile.

Reports from the East have it that sales along the Atlantic seaboard have jumped 10 percent immediately following the auto shows. The speed, beauty, comfort, safety and low cost of this year's automobile is being recognized with very definite results in the sales columns.

Detroit's loss tonight is Chicago's gain, with the closing of the Silver Jubilee show of the Detroit automobile dealers association and the opening of the twenty sixth national automobile show in the Chicago Coliseum.

The motor car event was the greatest from every standpoint in the history of automobile row here. More cars were shown, more space used and more visitors accomodated than at any previous Detroit exhibition. Although no report on sales was available at a late hour Saturday, Dealers generally declare that more cars were sold this year than ever.

The Detroit show was essentially the same as the national show in New York three weeks ago. Nothing new in the way of new models or price changes came to light, meanwhile. John Duval Dodge negotiated one more step toward the realization of his "Dodgeson," eight cylinder rotary job when he displayed the motor and chasis at the Detroit show. Only the motor was shown in New York.

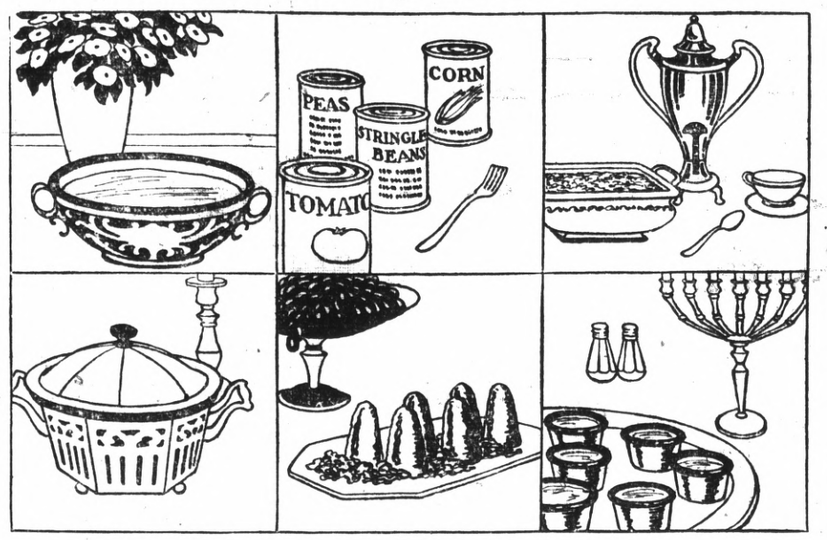
Detroit was keenly interest in the new Chrysler Six Imperial with its promise of 80 miles an hour; It was studiously concealed with the new Stutz Eight-In-Line and the many departures and advances it embodies; it was partial to the new Pontiac Six, with two models each listing at $825; it was curiously interested in Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker's Super Sport Roadster, which is guaranteed to deliver 90 miles an hour and listing at $5,000 and it spent a great deal of enthusiasm on the new Willys Knight Six "70" the new Hupp eight and the new Paige Six.

Several large meetings, notably the annual convention of the society of automotive engineers, were held here during the week. More than 1,000 engineers were here to inspect the show, visit the factories and discuss the automobile of the future. Sessions on the possibilities of the super charger and on body building were held at length. Three aircraft meetings indicated the extent to which the engineers are considering this comparatively new means of transportation.

Santa Rosa—First National bank building being remodeled.

Manteca—North Main street being paved.

The Thrifty Housewife



IT was Benjamin Franklin, the great apostle of thrift, who first emphasized the point that true thrift lies in getting the best value—not merely for one's money, but for one's time as well. This might, indeed, be called "the higher thrift," and the modern woman is rapidly learning to readjust her standard of values to get in line with it. The establishment of an annual Thrift Week, beginning on January 17th, which is Franklin's birthday indicates a general acceptance of his philosophy of thrift.

Real thrift is not going without, but making the most of things—our talents, our money, our time. The thrifty housewife learns to spend her money judiciously. She saves on her food budget by getting the best values for her money, and she soon discovers that ready-to-serve foods offer her one of the best forms of thrift.

She has learned that ready-to-serve foods are a real economy not only of money, but of time and labor. So she lays in a varied supply of them, and selects what she wants from her canned food shelf. She seasons them, spices them, adds butter, eggs or bacon, combines them with other foods, such as bread and cracker crumbs, etc., ad infinitum. There is almost no limit to the tasty combinations that may be made of these prepared foods.

She will particularly learn to use the good, old staples, such as corn, peas, tomatoes and string beans, making out of them many a savory, wholesome and economical dish. These might be termed The Old Guard among vegetables, but there are others almost as essential to the daily menu—baked beans, spaghetti, spinach, sauerkraut, beets, pumpkin and sweet potatoes. All of these are high in food value.

These foods are particularly economical in canned form, because the great demand for them enables the canners to pack and sell them in large quantities, at a very small profit per can. At first thought, it may seem to the housewife that it is cheaper for her to buy fresh sweet potatoes and "candy" them, than to buy the ready-prepared product in canned form. This is true, if she is ready to cook the sweet potatoes on the day she buys them. But if she keeps them on hand for several days, they spoil and must be thrown away. She must also take into consideration the saving of time represented by the sweet potatoes in tins.

The many savory dishes which may be made from the ready-to-serve staples permit the housewife much variety in her daily menus. Corn, for instance, may be sauté with chopped green peppers, which also may be had in canned form. Or, if there is any mashed potato left over, delicious croquettes may be made by mixing it with ready-to-serve corn. The possibilities are infinite.

Perhaps one of the strongest incentives to buying food in tins is the fact that there is no waste in them. There are no peelings, no rinds, no cores, no spoilage. All the parts which cannot be eaten have been eliminated before the food went into the cans. There is nothing to be thrown away, as in the case of fresh foods.

To the modern woman time-saving has a very definite, economical value. The hours which she would otherwise have to spend in the various details of the preparation and cooking of foods, the ready-to-serve products permit her to devote to the social, mental and spiritual needs of her family, and to participate in the world's work along various important lines.

Immigration Laws Of U. S. Commended By English Dean

ROBERT J. DREW
(By Universal Service)

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Dean Inge has come to the fore with a strong commendation of the immigration policy of the United States.

Despite frequent criticisms of the methods of Ellis Island which have appeared here, the eminent Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral fully approves of the quota system and the selective methods employed as calculated to build up a nation of first-class citizens of sound physique and mentality. He says:

"If other nations follow the example of America, the new countries as a whole will establish a far higher racial type than the average of Europe.

"The old countries, handicapped by the heavy burden of supporting a host of incapables—imbeciles, criminals, invalids, and work-shy dole-hunters—will in self-defense have to put their own houses in order. The dysgenic tendency of civilization may at last be reversed.

"No nation can afford to keep and provide for all its biological and social failures, while exporting half of its best citizens. We shall be driven in time to devote to our own species some fraction of the care and science which we bestow upon our livestock. Then the unpopular and despised eugenists will come into their own."

Key System Dance Draws Large Crowd

A benefit dance was given by the Key System employees last night at East Shore park. The Odd Fellows 7-piece ballroom dance orchestra furnished the music. The committee in charge of the dance was composed of the following employees:

C. F. Tannelly, H. Hintz and E. Haines.

Despite the bad weather, a large crowd gathered. The North District Mutual Benefit Association was in charge of the affair.

Baby Saved From Heart Trouble

Martinez, Nov. 6, 1925.
Our baby, Myrtle, had been ailing about two years, during which time we had taken her to many physicians, none of whom knew what was the matter with her.

Myrtle steadily grew worse. Her heart beat rapidly and noisily, she had but little blood, and the pallor of her face was like the whiteness of a sheet of paper. She finally became so weak that she could neither walk nor eat. Some doctors thought it might be her teeth, but they had all come through and she was getting worse every day.

We were recommended to see Fong Wan. He found that she was suffering from heart trouble. She has taken the Fong Wan Herbs for three months and is in fine health.

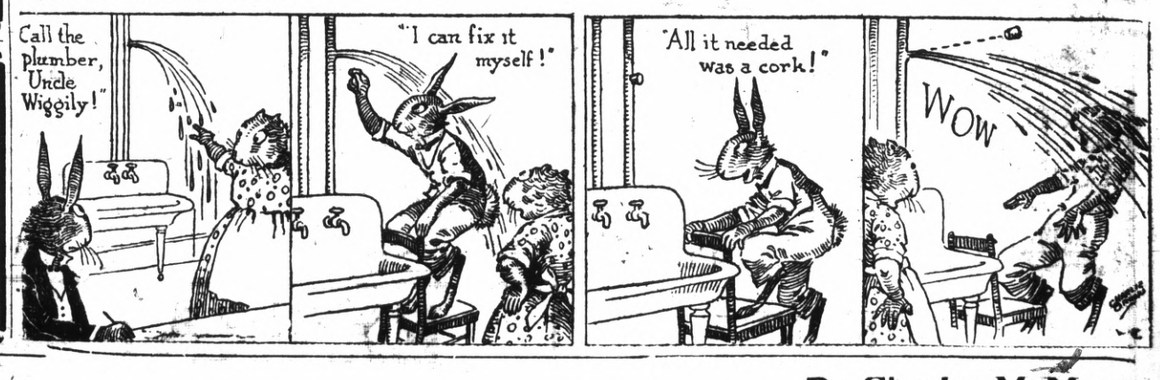
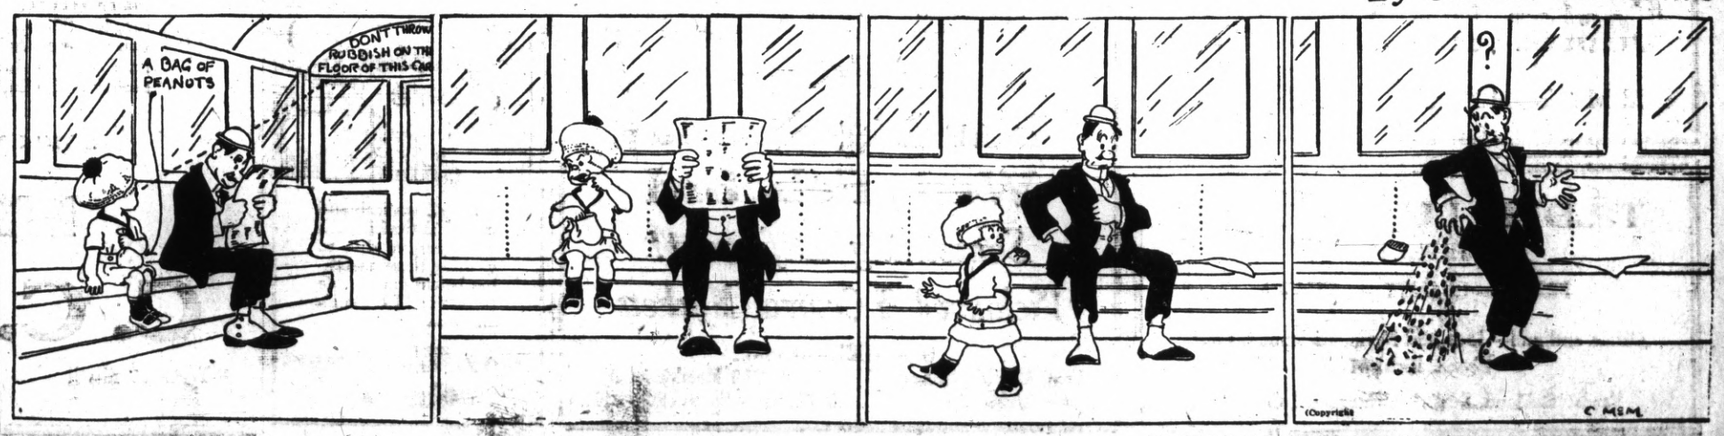
UNCLE WIGGILY'S TRICKS



DOROTHY DARNIT — By Charles McManus



ADMITS THEFT, SAYS FAMILY WAS IN NEED

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30. — Frank B. Taskett, of 189 Parnassus avenue, surrendered himself to the police early today and confessed to the holdingup of William McBirney, 2547 Twenty-fourth avenue, and Miss Evelyn Anderson, 2439 Thirtieth avenue late last night. Taskett said that his wife was ill and he was penniless, and he was determined to get money somewhere.

The couple was seated in an automobile on the Skyline boulevard near the Sloat boulevard, when a machine drove 200 feet beyond them stopped, and the occupant of the car walked up, held up the couple with a pistol, tied them hand and foot and placed gags in their mouths. The robber searched both of them, but obtained only 70 cents from McBirney. Patrolman Hogan and Kelleher, who had been investigating an automobile accident nearby heard Miss Anderson's groans and stopped to investigate. The bandit fled, but his machine was found by the officers.

Taskett appeared at the Park police station at 3:30 o'clock this morning. The police are investigating Taskett's story. They are working on the theory that he might not have surrendered so readily had he not been forced by the near presence of two police officers to abandon his own machine, thus revealing by its license number, his own identity.

Taskett stated that his wife has been ill for some time and had been confined in the Livermore sanitarium before the family moved to San Francisco. She and the baby were in want and he was determined to get money. Following the robbery he had gone to his fater-in-law's house and had been persuaded to give himself up, he stated.

TENTH ANNUAL AUTO SHOW IS OPENED IN S. F.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—The tenth Annual Pacific Automobile Show opened tonight on a dazzling array of motor cars, trucks and accessories in an Exposition Auditorium magnificently decorated for the occassion with Paul Whiteman's famous jazz band rendering musical selection that brought salvos of aplause.

This show, the greatest from every respect that has ever been held on the Pacific Coast, has so many features that it is hard to select any one for special mention. Outstanding among the attractions of course is the Jazz King and his selections and if the enthusiasm expressed by the crowds tonight is any indication of the reception that is going to be given the Whiteman band here, the show will have to be extended a week longer to take care of the crowds.

From six o'clock on the Auditorium was packed. So thick were the people in the aisles that it was difficult to view the various exhibits. Reserved seats in the Balconies, an innovation this year at the show, were greedily grabbed by the throngs and those that once secured seats held them throughout the evening.

In between musical offerings the crowds turned their thoughts to the new models that were on display, a most complete showing of the 1926 offerings of the automobile industry and the most spectacular display of cars ever seen on the Pacific Coast. For the first time in automobile history the automobile fans on the Pacific Coast have the opportunity of viewing the new car offerings of the year coincident with the people of the east and the middle west, for both the San Francisco and Chicago automobile shows opened last night and both run for the same length of time.

No new or radical developments in motor car design and construction are to be noted although every car shown has features that are new, appointments and refinements that are pleasing to the eye and machanical improvements that insure more power, more speed and greater reliability.

The outstanding feature of the cars is their appeal to the eye. Bright colors are found in all the displays. Sedans, coaches, brougham, limousines even, excel in brightness of coloring the sport roadsters and touring cars of a few years ago.

The women especially are enthusiastic about the beauty of the cars in the various exhibits. Upholstery matches body colors. Fancy striping makes the cars look longer as well as niftier. Many new appointments and fittments that were formerly extra equipment are now standard equipment at no extra cost. Powder boxes, smoking sets, dome lights, fancy instrument boards, the bric a brac that adds class to the closed cars in the high priced field are now to be found on low priced automobiles.

Lower prices also prevail in spite of added equipment and in the face of increasing material and labor costs, showing those who are keen students of the trade that the competitive battle between the giants of the automobile manufacuring industry continues to be the governing factor in price setting.

Never before in the history of any American manufacturing industry has the manufacturer offered so great value per dollar as does the motor car manufacturer at this the beginning of 1926. With the increasing costs of raw materials, with the climbing of rubber and the consequent increase in prices of tires, the wise men in the industry feel that prices must soon advance and that they are today at the lowest point that they will reach for some years to come.

Several new cars are displayed for the first time at the San Francisco show, having been announced in New York and brought west by express to the coast for the display here. Other new models are announced for the first time on the coast in the show editions of the San Francisco papers today. New models, new cars, new low prices, these are features enough to draw the crowds to the big coast display. But in addition to the motor car display, the musical program under the direction of Paul Whiteman, American King of Jazz, will attract thousands more and the outlook for the week is crowded houses every afternoon and evening.

Charleston Jazz Featured At a Turk Wedding

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 30.—The latest Charleston jazz accompanied the first Turkish marriage celebrated in conformity with the new western customs introduced in Turkey. The ceremony took place in Eski-Bechir, between a government employee and a school teacher.

The bride and groom signed a contract in which it was agreed that they should enjoy equal rights and liberties. Any attempt by one party to interfere with the liberties of the other, would be considered a violation of the marriage contract. The dowery was fixed at 500 Turkish pounds, with a provision that if a divorce action should be started, the plaintiff would be required to pay the defendant 500 pounds.

The average man is a poor judge of his own importance.

Two Brothers Work Clever Bond Theft

an officer of the bank, as one which had been worked before in San Francisco and which might be employed again if effective means were not instituted to prevent it.

Owing to a clever system of accounts kept by Julius to escape detection, except by a complete audit, and to the extent of time necessary to check on the non-delivery of the securities to the foreign purchasers the operations of the brothers were not discovered until recently.

Knowing that an accounting will come sooner or later, the brothers obtained leave of absence to visit their homes in Australia last October. No trace has been found of them since.
